

This animation is about not being a part of the group and not forcing yourself to be. If you try to be like others, you may break.

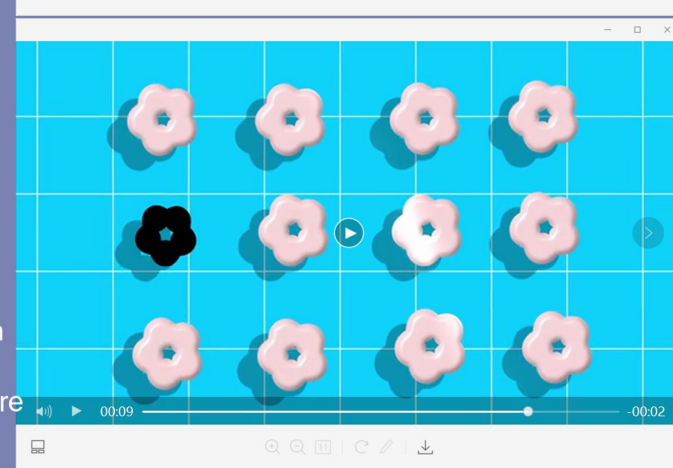

In fact, for the whole project, I spent the most time thinking about what I wanted to achieve and try to think about what functions I could use to reach the expected result. When I started I tried to do effect of gradually transparent clouds slowly disappearing, but the clouds didn't have a clear narrative so I gave up. Because I learned how to move the shapes around in the affereffect first, I chose to start with a narrative that was expressed through the shape change. During the process, I add some effects to make the result look more complete, and the final outcome is truly more complete due to some effects.
