

I tried using a mask to put the building on the branch layer, but it comes out very messy. I tried using a mask to put the building on the layer of the branch, but it came out very messy. So I tried to remove the messy parts and copy a layer to make the background clean. The material used in this composite photo is from a park. I thought the bubble wrap covered birds would look interesting, so I pulled up the contrast of the branches to give them a more clear texture. I adjusted the position of the birds and copied one, I think the image would be more coherent with two birds.

I am not really sensitive to composition and light, but this time using black and white help me to learn contrast light and dark. To make the photo more coherent need to adjust various values.
