

The sun came through the window, I woke up then look for slippers and stepped on my cat. When I drew the third picture I add some light and shade similar to the first two pictures to give the three pictures some connection, but the result is not very good. The colours in the pictures are very messy and I think this may be because the light and shadows are inaccurate, I will try to adjust the colours afterwards.

This week did some sketching, drawing quickly by observ the shapes and movement of objects. I am not very good at drawing accurate lines, but this week I have learnt how to look at the hidden angles. I tried to find some interesting picture and draw it, but I found that I could not remember what I was drawing sometimes, so I had to guess base on the time and shape.

Some angles change my ideas about the final outcome, which actually gives me more variety of thought, but it doesn't improve my drawing skills in the long term, so I practice sketching and mind map separately. I had a complex storyboard in mind and couldn't tell it in three pictures, so I threw that one out and chose a simpler story.

Fangyi Ren

<https://fionaaaa.myblog.arts.ac.uk/>